

God knows all of my days and all the days of time. I am very joyful that he does, too. He is a very trustworthy and truthful God. In that case, I must have been born in this generation for a purpose. I think that purpose is to try to help the people in this generation.

A girl named Nicole is one of the people that I have helped in this generation. One day I was outside with her playing. All of a sudden she started to cry. I asked her what was wrong and she told me her grandparents were planning to separate. I hugged her and said I would pray for her. I prayed for her every single day. The very next week, she told me they were back together again. She moved away recently, so I don't get to see her anymore. But I feel I made a little difference in her life.

Another person that I have helped was Jolimar who was from my summer camp. A bunch of people from my age group would tease her saying she was fat. We weren't even friends then, yet I still hated it when they would tease her. One day I was so mad that they were teasing her, I went over to where they were and told them that if they didn't stop teasing her I would tell one of the staff members. That scared them off, and they were too afraid to tease her anymore. After that it was very likely that you would see us together. We were best friends! I don't see her everyday anymore, but I know she was happy to be my friend. I hope she had a great summer with me. I think if I hadn't stepped in she would have had a horrible summer.

A girl named Jennifer is another person I have helped. One time I went with my dad when he went to play basketball with some guys, which is where my friend Alicia and I met Jennifer. She had neither mom nor dad to take care of her and love her so she was raised by her older sister. So my friend Alicia and I prayed for her and told her about Jesus. I only saw her one time after that, but I hope she has Jesus involved in her life.

In summary, I must have been born for a purpose and that seems to be to help people who are suffering. All these things I do now may not seem huge to everybody, but I feel I made a difference in another person's life. I am glad that God loves me so much that He allowed me to be born in this generation. I think I was born now instead of in another generation not only for God to help me but also so that I can help others.
