

Why was I born in the year and age that I was? A very good question. I'm not sure, so I'll just ask God when I get to heaven. Certain things in your faith are unanswerable while you're living on earth. So to answer this question I'll be doing a lot of guessing. I guess God's design and plan for me will work better for me to be living in the days of video games, computers and TV than in the days of buggies and early trains and muskets, or than the days of swords, carts and spears. God's plan for me has a purpose, and even if I don't like the age I'm living in, (Which I do) there isn't much I can do about it. God may have put me here with a big plan, like becoming president of the United States of America, or maybe not changing much anything except my family, but whatever reason, I know that I'm here because God wants me here, so I'd better try and find out his reason and do whatever it is. Maybe I've found out already, but just not conscious of it, and need to realize that I've found the plans, now need to start them. Even though I'm only 9, God probably wants me to start doing his plan for my life. Everyone has a plan for their life, set there by God, and God's plan includes the time he needs in order to carry out his plan for your life. Sometimes I wish I was born in some other age, but most of the time I'm content with the life He gave me. And if you're complaining about the age you're living in, remember that, one, God is all-powerful and he placed you here, so complaining about it does nothing except make you miserable, and two, if you discover that God's plan for you're life is difficult, remember that all the hardships you endure here on earth will turn into eternal prosperity in heaven. Don't just give up and say, "God's plan for my life is too difficult in this age, but if he had put me in a different age, I'd do it 'till I died." Remember, that in a different age God's plan might be just as hard, or maybe even harder. Thinking this when I'm having a difficult time trying not to wish that I lived in a different time has comforted me quite a bit. And if God's plan is big and he wants you to be a TV star, and you say, "But I don't have the looks or the talent!" don't go with that. That is a lie from Satan. Genesis 1:27 says, So God created man in His own image; in the image of God He created him; male and female He created them.

David also said that the Lord was his strength and refuge. So even if you don't think that God put you in the right age or gave you the right looks and talents, remember He put you in this age and gave you what He gave you for a purpose.
