

Fort Waterloo

I've decided that if I were given charge of $100,000, I would use it to construct an immense water fort for people to have squirt-gun battles in. First I would have to buy a $50,000 or less plot of land to erect my massive fort on. Because I don't want the people who come to the fort to have to endure the annoyance of running around trees and other such obstacles, I will have to uproot all the trees and remove all the rocks in the area I will build Fort Waterloo. Next I would need to purchase lumber, pebbles, and other supplies to build the fort. Once I purchase all the supplies, I would then construct a check-in stand, outpost, the main fort, and even some walls to hide behind. Incredibly there will be no age limit and the admission fee will be $0.50 per person an hour. To attract more visitors, I would attach barrels to the fort, which with the pull of a lever would drop water on enemy units. Once I get my business going, I plan to add on to Fort Waterloo a swimming pool, gift shop and other such attractions. Though it may cost a great amount to keep the fort going, I should have $30,000 left to keep the massive, spectacular, worthwhile, and praiseworthy Fort Waterloo standing.
